National security and cyber threats and challenges need innovative solutions

Have you got the answer?

Share your ideas in the annual KPMG essay award for innovative thinking about countering Australia’s national security and cyber threats and challenges.

Pick one of our two topics, shape your thoughts into 3000 to 3500 words, and your entry will be reviewed by our industry experts.

What to do:
Look out for the questions and details on how to enter in early May. Get writing and submit by Friday 24 June 2016.

Second and third place-getters will receive $500 and $300 respectively.

The best submissions will be considered for publication by KPMG.

In partnership with Macquarie University’s Department of Security Studies and Criminology (DSSC)

Eligibility criteria
All applicants must be current postgraduate students from the Department of Security Studies and Criminology (DSSC).
